BALLOON RACE

One Contestant Fails To Get Headed East.

Prize Won By Geo. C. Tomlinson's Balloon Says Late Report.

St. Louis, Aug. 27.—George C. Tomlinson, of Syracuse, Carl Meyers of Frankfurt, N. Y., contestants for the $5,000 prize offered by the Louisiana Purchase exposition to the aeronaut who comes nearest reaching the Washington monument at Washington, D. C. made successful ascensions this evening. The balloons headed due West, exactly in the opposite direction of the goal, and in thirty minutes had disappeared from view.

Meyers Drops Out.

St. Louis, Aug. 28.—Prof. Carl Meyers, the aeronaut, who started in a race from the World's Fair grounds yesterday afternoon for the Washington monument, and whose balloon landed near St. Charles last night returned to the city today. Prof. Meyers said he landed where he did because he feared he would be unable to catch an upper air current that would take him east. After leaving the World's Fair grounds the balloon was carried in a northwesterly direction. Neither he nor the balloon was injured, the professor said.

Tomlinson Starts East And Wins.

Avon, Ill., Aug. 28.—A balloon, supposed to be from St. Louis en route to Washington, passed over Avon today, going in an easterly direction, and dropped a card attached to a bun. The card bore the potato patch of W. H. Case, Mr. Case found the card, on which had been written, "Will you please write and tell of balloon passing town or city?" George Tomlinson, World's Fair grounds care W. B. Smith.

The balloon was seen by many citizens of Avon. It is estimated that it was more than a mile high and going at the rate of two miles an hour.

102 YEARS OLD.

Claiborne Buckner, Oldest Person In County, Dead.

Claiborne Buckner, colored, probably the oldest man in this part of Kentucky, if not in the State, died at his home in this city, last Thursday night. He claimed to be 102 years of age. Until he became entangled with old age, he was a servant in the family of Mrs. Virginia Latham. He was one of the good old time "darkies" of ante bellum days, who was respected by all who knew him.

FIGHT FOR ROOSEVELT.

Clarksville, Tenn., Aug. 28.—During a performance of a circus here yesterday afternoon one of the clowns was giving a burlesque on President Roosevelt when two negro men in the crowd became offended and took the matter up. Hot words led to blows, and a negro named T. Martin was badly beaten up by one of the clowns. Two clowns and two negroes were placed under arrest by the police for fighting.

Trap Gun Kills Negro Burglar.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 26.—The store of R. F. Lacey, where a burglar was recently caught in a bear trap, was the scene of a tragedy last night. A negro, Will Smith, being shot to death by a trap gun, placed for burglars. The store had been burglarized several times recently; the burglars evading the bear trap. A spring gun was set last night. The negro had on clothes stolen from the store Tuesday night.

FIGHT RESUMED

And Japs Cause Another Russian Retreat.

Port Arthur Has Not Been Taken And More Men Sent By Japan.

London, Aug. 28.—According to a dispatch of to-day's date to the Central News from Liao Yang, an artillery battle has been in progress since 8 o'clock this morning near Liao Yang. The Russian main position, the dispatch says, is what was formerly the outpost line of the Liao Yang garrison.

The fight at Anshanshan resulted in a Russian retreat, after continuing all day and all night. The Russians lost heavily. The retreat, it is stated, was in an orderly manner, and the order to retreat was a great disappointment to the troops, who were fighting valiantly against odds, according to reports from Russian sources. It is a general belief that a big battle will be fought at Liao Yang. Japan is said to be sending reinforcements to Port Arthur, and 22,000 men have arrived at Dairen in transports in the past two weeks. The progress being made at Port Arthur is slow, but the besieging force is reported to have captured an important fort.

Will Hold the Ship.

Aug. 28.—Formal declaration of war against the Chinese government by the Japanese will not be made until the Chinese demand of China for the return of the Russian destroyer which was seized by the Japanese in the harbor on Aug. 12.

ANNUAL SESSION.

The State Sunday School Association Meeting at Henderson.

TENNESSEE CENTRAL

Will Have Freight Agent Located Here Half His Time.

Henderson, Ky., Aug. 26.—The thirty-ninth annual convention of the State Sunday School Association began in St. Paul's Episcopal church, with more than four hundred delegates in attendance. The service was conducted by Rev. Henry H. Sweets, of Louisville, and K. M. Hopkins, of Anchorage. The address of welcome was delivered by John W. Lockett, of this city. The response on behalf of the delegates was made by Prof. H. K. Taylor, of Hechmont, General Secretary E. A. Fox, of Louisville, gave an instructive lecture.

ALL THE RAILROADS

Now Have Home Phones In Their Offices.

The Home Telephone Co yesterday received an order to put an instrument in the joint office of the Illinois Central and Tennessee Central railroads. There has been some delay in getting this order through the proper channels. Their number is 1434. The L. & N. was connected several weeks ago. This gives the Home Company connection with every railroad in the city. Their superior service is enabling them to gain ground rapidly. No city in the south has service equal to that furnished by the Home Company.

Mr. C. C. Lawton, traveling freight and passenger agent for the Tennessee Central Road, is in town looking after the interest of his company. It is Mr. Lawton's duty to work up as large a business as possible for his road to handle, both freight and passenger. In this he has been very successful on that part of the road running from Nashville to Harrison, Tenn. From Harrison the Tennessee Central runs several excursions annually to Nashville. They are known as Business Men's Excursions and the extremely low rate in force enables the merchants to go to Nashville to buy their fall and winter stocks (one of the aims of Mr. Lawton's present stay in Hopkinsville is to look into the matter of reducing excursions from this point to Nashville, and so far he has been given every encouragement by the business men and by those who would a sight-seeing go. The limit of the excursion ticket is usually four or five days. It is interesting to note that Mr. Lawton has instructions from his company to spend two or three days of each week in Hopkinsville waiting on our merchants. This practically gives Hopkinsville her own soliciting man and it is hoped that the shipping public will show its appreciation in a most substantial way.

A QUESTION OF CONSCIENCE.

BY JAMES HARVEY SMITH.

It is almost impossible to explain why a man of intelligence should exchange ease for discomfort and plenty for privation. It is admitted that the only reason why one should toil is the prospect of future rest. To simply secure enough food to satisfy the stomach and clothing to cover the body need not require more than a day's work in a week, and see what a simple shelter will afford us from the season's changes.

But we are not parts luxury and only one of necessity. There must be curtains and carpets to shut out air and earth dust, comfortable walls and pictures to delight the eye, and games and amusements without number. Expenses increase with the extent of the goal of rest and contentment perpetually recedes.

I have noticed that women are not worried in such a situation. Their entire life is a state of nervous unrest and they do not care to change it. Man is the savage animal; he is perpetually ready to fight for his life. He goes to the forest and lives in a cave. He has no clothes, no shelter, no food, no rest. He is in a constant state of war with the elements. He is in a constant state of war with the elements. He is in a constant state of war with the elements.

Perhaps it was for these reasons that I abandoned a good business in the east and went west. From Vermont to Idaho was forty-five years ago, and I had no more excuse for selecting the fit town within the shadow of the mountains than a chain saw at a railway yard.

It was a more hardy lot of less than 300 souls, but being on the edge of a railroad was a shipping point for hides and wool and one had a number of respectable shops and trades. With these people, however, I had no desire for affiliation. I did not intend to be a clerk, much less a hermit, but I had the desire to live apart from my fellow men for a time at least.

To that end I took up a claim three miles from town. It was an exceptionally fine piece of arable land for that region, and there I built a comfortable house of six rooms, stout with thick walls to withstand the winter's cold. The household goods I had brought from the east furnished it simply but comfortably, and here I settled down to a peaceful, lonely life.

I planted a good portion of my claim with hardy fruit trees, and on a half-acre garden raised enough vegetables to keep the table well supplied during the summer and stock the cellar for winter. My wife had her flower garden, and I set out plants and foliage around the house. I did not intend that solitude should deprive us of any creature comforts, and I had not made such a revolution in my conduct as to live without my wife's consent. She may have wondered, but she made no objections. In the Vermont town, where we were married, she was a belle and a model for her age, but she recognized her advantages without an apparent pang. Perhaps it was a woman's natural acquiescence and her intuitive knowledge that in time the time would pass from me and I would pine for the busy life of the world as I had for its seclusion.

It was in one third year that the incident occurred that sent me back to civilization. Our little girl, our only child, was then two years old, and that was another reason why my wife was content.

The winter set in early that year and with great rigor, and by the first of December the thermometer registered below zero every day. Fortunately we had an ample supply of fuel, plenty of provisions, and lots of reading matter, and for a month we lived a life of idleness. Then it began to snow, at first intermittently and then in a steady fall until there was at least three feet on the level. This was followed by a thaw, which packed the snow, and then cold weather set in anew.

It was now the middle of January, and just while I was congratulating myself on the easy way in which we were getting through the winter, Amy, our little girl, was taken ill.

At the beginning of winter I had sold my horse as being too much for her to care for, so I tramped to town and brought back the doctor in the cutter. This was a remarkable man, Dr. Morton. In the moment of knowledge he must have been at the head of his profession. He was almost the only man in town with whom I had friendly intercourse, and I was amazed to find that he possessed a well stocked library, was cognizant of the latest discoveries in medicine, and, above all, had that masterful air that goes so far toward the success of doctor or divine. When I once found that he was hiding his light under a bushel, he laughed and said, "I wish to come to Idaho. It was his wish, as mine."

He saw Amy and pronounced the case malignant, some throat and diphtheritic symptoms.

"You had better bring her to town," said he.

"Why?" I asked, "there is no more comfortable home in town than this."

"No," he assented, with a lift of his eye, "but there are more people here to see you."

"Then I would not get it," I replied. "Everybody is afraid of diphtheria—I don't blame them. But my wife and I will not act on guesses. I can't write out detailed prescriptions."

He did so and did the necessary duties. The next day he paid another visit, and did Amy was better, and the next day all danger was past. He told us what treatment to continue and left us.

Four nights later my wife complained of a sore throat. My heart gave a great jump of alarm. It was nearly ten o'clock and Amy was sleeping quietly in her crib. Outside it was clear and starlight, but the cold was intense.

"Let me look down your throat," I said.

"There is no doubt of it. The diphtheritic spots were there. She saw the news in my face."

"I suspected it," she said, quietly, and with a woman's self-restraint. "I am so sorry; you will have to go for Dr. Morton. I will wrap up my throat in ice bandages, such as he prescribed for Amy. You will be back in two hours, any how."

I lost no time in words, and in five minutes was on my way to the town. I could see the few twinkling lights of the houses, as the town lay lower down the valley, and there was no danger of losing my way, although there was no path.

Snow covered everything in sight and the crust was frozen solid. The temperature was 20 below zero, but there was no wind, and the air was like wine. This peculiar weather of the high north coast is a mystery to residents of the middle states. Well wrapped and keeping in motion, it has no serious for the healthful, and they thrive on it.

I kept in motion, you may be sure; indeed, I kept on a dog trot, and in less than 30 minutes I was in the doctor's study.

He was fully dressed and on the point of going out, but I did not at once grasp the significance of his appearance.

"Just in time," I gasped.

"He listened to my story, and then questioned me minutely until I was in a nervous agony."

"Come and judge for yourself," I cried at length.

"We are wasting time. Get out your cruet; you can put up your horse in my barn and stay all night."

"I have another engagement three miles west," he said, gravely.

"But my wife!"

"Is a patient, and so is this man who has met with an accident, and he has applied first. He is in intense pain, which I can relieve, although I may not save his life."

"And meanwhile my wife will die."

"Not necessarily, if you follow my directions. Now, listen to me attentively. There is a powder which you will dissolve in a half pint of lukewarm water, and use as a gargle. These pellets are to be taken two every half hour, and with this—"

"You must swallow the throat as far down as you can reach, using this brush. Now hurry home as fast as you can!"

Something in his manner alarmed me exceedingly.

"Is it so bad?" I asked.

"Very," he answered, bluntly. "From your description of my wife I must have had the symptoms at least 24 hours, but underrated their importance, or perhaps did not wish to alarm you. In this disease there is a most important element of the cure, and every moment is precious. I know of no horse that you can conveniently borrow or hire, and I cannot lend you mine. If you are a fast walker, if you do not linger there is little doubt that you can check the disease until I get there, which will be to-morrow morning. Now, go!"

While talking he had made the remedies into a bundle and slipped them into my pocket, and now I was off like a shot.

I could not see my house, even when I was clear of the town, but I could locate it by the same instinct that guides the hunter through the forest and the pioneer across the prairie. This much I had learned in my three years' residence, and I would have run all the way home, but here a new obstacle arose.

The sky had become overcast during the few minutes I had been housed with the doctor, and there was even now a spit of snow in the air, the forerunner of a mountain storm. I recognized that here was a case where more haste was decidedly less speed, since deviation from the direct route meant not only delay but death. Yet time was precious.

I hurried up the slight incline, the snow every moment thickening and more impeding my way, and I roundly cursed the storm at every step. I do not remember when I was so exasperated at material causes. It seemed so unjust that the elements should conspire against my efforts to save life.

The snow increased in volume and now the wind began to blow, the snow in swirls. People in the eastern and middle states who call every violent snowstorm a "blizzard" do not know what they are talking about. In a real blizzard the wind blows in no particular direction, but seems to come from every point of the compass and also up and down. The eyes are blinded, it is difficult to breathe, and all sense of locality is lost.

Fortunately this was not a fully developed blizzard, or I should never have lived to tell this story, but it was severe enough to fill me with apprehension, and I breathed a sigh of satisfaction when I came to a huge boulder that cropped up on the plain, and I knew that I was in the right path and less than a mile from home.

Just as I left the shelter of the boulder I fell over something on the ground, and before I could rise a hand clutched my coat.

It was a man, almost covered with snow. He rose to his knees, still holding to my coat, and in a voice faint and almost inhuman cried: "Stranger, for the love of God, help me out of this!"

"The road is straight before you to the town," I said, trying to pluck away from him. "Rest under the lee of this rock and then push on."

"I can hardly move," he moaned, rising to his feet with great difficulty. "I'm clean beat—walked 20 miles since three o'clock—I'm chilled to the bone."

"Follow me then to my house," I said, with rising impatience at the delay.

As I strode forward he caught me again and walked by my side quite briskly for a dozen steps, and then fell back again like a dog.

"Heaven, man!" I cried, giving him a shake. "I am in urgent haste. I cannot carry you—you must keep up."

"I'm doing the best I can," he replied through his chattering teeth, and even through the storm I could see his wan face shrink with pain. "Don't be too hard on me, pardner; I'd do as much for you."

"I know you would; but this is a matter of life and death."

"It is for me—sure."

He gave another lurch and this time fell on the ground.

I was in despair. The man was a raving, howling miser. I had never seen him before, and he was nothing to me except a human being, one of a billion. It would be necessary fairly to drag him to my house, and that would require at least an hour, even if my strength did not give out. Meanwhile what would happen to my wife? The warning words of the doctor stood out before me as if written in letters of fire.

Never was man placed in a worse predicament. If I left this man to his cold surely he would die, and I reached home so much as a minute late my wife might die. There passed through my mind with the rapidity of lightning every tale I had ever heard of engineers sticking to the locomotive going to certain destruction in the effort to save the passengers in the coaches; the captains who stood on deck and went down with the ship while the boats carried away the passengers; the men who let forth their lives in battle or siege; the man who leaped into the chasm to save Rome; the men and women who ministered to plague-stricken cities and died from the scourge; every one who died from devotion to duty.

These men and women left men, women and children behind them to suffer, while the world applauded the acts of heroism. But what is the applause of the world save empty sound? A star here and there, a line in history's pages, or maybe a notice in a newspaper, and that is all. Who chronicles the sorrow of the heart wrung and perhaps impoverished dependents of the forgotten heroes? Who gives them thought while gazing on the statue or tomb?

And yet—it is simple human nature to sneer the distressed. There is not one case in a thousand of honest poverty; improvidence and vice are the parents of beggary and want, but who can calmly dissect the cause when hunger appeals? Who can stop to inquire into the character of a man who is struggling in the rapids?

These opposite views presented themselves to me as the man lay at my feet, and occupied but a minute.

I made a step away from him and he cried in agony:

"Pardner, you ain't going to leave me here to die!"

Again I hesitated, and then made my final resolve.

You have heard the argument and you know the situation. You know what you would have done in my position.

Well, that is what I did.—Chicago Tribune.

SOME DANGEROUS FOODS.

Dire Effects Which Are Said to Follow the Use of These Things.

Take a drink of water, and typhoid states at you, says the American Echo.

Drink fresh milk, and you will get tuberculosis.

Drink soup and get Bright's disease.

If you eat you encourage an attack for appendix.

Fish may give you floating kidneys, and lobsters may make you feel crabby.

Eat vegetables and weaken your system.

Desserts, puddings and pies will make you feel drowsy, and create a tendency to paresis.

Drink whisky and brandy and get the jim-jams.

Enjoy cigarettes and die early. Cigars will give you catarrh and a tobacco heart.

Drink coffee and you will obtain nervous prostration.

Drink wine and get the gout. Beer will make you sleepy and croon fat.

What a trouble it is to live! In order to be entirely healthy one must eat nothing, never drink anything, leave smoking alone and, by the way, don't breathe unless you have the air properly sterilized with carbolic acid, camphor and vinegar. Would not this be a life of bliss? Oh, goodness, what a blessing.

To Discourage Suicide.

In Japan a favorite method of committing suicide is to throw one's self over a waterfall. Police are stationed at several waterfalls adjacent to the cities. Near one of them is a conspicuous sign, bearing these words: "Do not drown yourself here! Intending suicides are warned that Heaven disapproves of the utilization of this waterfall for the purpose."

This is certified on the best priestly authority, and serious consequences in the hereafter are guaranteed. To drown here is also forbidden by the authorities.—London Tit-Bits.

ROPE TRAMWAYS OF POMPEII

Produced Cables of Wire Such as Are Supposed to Be of Modern Invention.

Ropes made of various kinds of fiber and leather are of very ancient date. Ropes of palm have been found in Egypt in the tombs of Beni-Hassan (about 3000 B. C.), and on the walls of these tombs is also shown the process of preparing hemp, says the Philadelphia Record.

The Bible tells us that Samson was bound with ropes and that the spirit went by Joshua into Jericho where he was in a basket, presumably by means of a rope.

At Nimrod, Assyria, a carved slab showing the siege of a castle was found, on which a soldier was represented in the act of cutting a rope to which a bucket for drawing water from a well outside the castle walls was attached.

The wire rope is generally considered a modern invention, a product of modern skill, and it will surprise many to learn that the manufacture is really a rediscovered art.

Although the Assyrians practiced the art of wire beating, no evidence has been found to indicate that they used wire for making ropes.

The civilizations at Pompeii have, however, brought to light a piece of bronze wire rope nearly 15 feet long and about one inch in diameter. This rope is now in the museum at the University of Naples.

It consists of three strands spirally together, each strand being made up of 15 wires twisted together, and its construction does not, therefore, differ greatly from that of wire ropes made today.

Pompeii was buried A. D. 79, 1,825 years ago, but how long wire ropes had then been known it is impossible to tell, though, judging by the knowledge shown in the construction, it may be safely concluded that they had been known for a considerable time.

As to the use of rope tramways, it is said that they were in use as early as 1644.

HEARSE NOT SEEN AT NIGHT
Undertakers Make It a Point to Have the Vehicle in Before Dark.

"Nobody gives us fellows credit for having a large business of confidence," said an undertaker to a New York Times man,
"but the fact is, we go to a great deal of trouble to safeguard the feelings of the general public.
For one thing, we try never to keep our hearse in the street after dark."

"Of course, in the case of afternoon funerals and long distances we cannot avoid getting home late, but, even so, we make it a point to get under cover as soon as possible after nightfall. And we do that absolutely out of consideration for the public. By nine people out of ten the sight of a hearse in the street at night is taken as a sure sign of impending death and disaster."

"Even in the daytime a hearse is a gloomy affair. But to run up against one at night is pretty sure to give the most jovial fellow alive a depressing turn. I know how it is myself. Accustomed as I am to handling hearse, I don't like to bump into one unexpectedly at a dark corner."

"Most men in the business feel the same way, therefore, we strive to be considerate. That we succeed remarkably well is apparent to anybody who will take the trouble to count the hearse he has seen out at night. These are so few that I'll wager the most confirmed egotist cannot recall more than three or four of them."

Paris Educates Pups.
A school for dogs is the latest development of the educational movement. It has been established in Paris with the object of teaching, not letters, but politeness.
The schoolroom is furnished with chairs, tables and rugs, to give the necessary "familiar color" to the surroundings. The dog pupils are trained to welcome visitors by jumping up, wagging the tail and giving a low bark. When the visitor leaves the dog accompanies him to the door and bows his farewell by bending his head to the floor.—Philadelphia Press.

The Democratic convention of the Eleventh district nominated Geo. Stone, of Wayne county, for Congress.

The Vermont State election will be held September 6, and the Democrats are making an effort to reduce the Republican majority.

Marshall Field, of Chicago, is the heaviest individual taxpayer in the United States, being assessed on $40,000,000.

The Supreme Lodge of Knights of Pythias recognized the Rathbone Sisters as an auxiliary order by a vote of 60 to 40. The Pythian Sisterhood, which failed to secure recognition, will probably disband.

Three young men in Hardin county confessed to a charge of jumping on a moving train and were tried and fined by telephone, the justice never bringing them into his presence.

If any of our farmer friends have cattle afflicted with oophoraggonosis infatium, we advise them to use the remedy recommended by the Missouri State Veterinarian—a drench made of three ounces of gasoline in a pint of sweet milk.

The Kentuckian can see no good to come from making the race question a political issue in the South. If Roosevelt wants to eat with negroes, it is merely a question of taste for him to decide. The race question will in time adjust itself, if the politicians will let it alone.

Chairman Krast, of the Republican state central committee, has called a meeting of his committee for Sept. 5, at Louisville, to consider the Hunter-Edwards contest in the Eleventh district. W. W. Byrley, the district chairman, who put the knife to Edwards, is a member of the State committee.

Miss Edna Smith, a telephone girl in Louisville, saved the life of Dudley Smith, a two-year-old child, by snatching him from in front of a rapidly approaching street car, the tender of which grazed her skirts as she escaped with the boy. Further than being members of the same great Smith family, they are not related.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The Indianapolis Sentinel says Gov. Durbin is tired of the Taylor issue in Indiana. It concludes a lengthy editorial with these words: "In justice to Governor Durbin it should be said that but for the fact he received this burden as a legacy from Governor Mount, he would have long ago surrendered Taylor to the Kentucky authorities. He feels that it is his duty to do so yet, and only shuns the responsibility because the politicians of his party demand that he shall carry his load of death. Governor Durbin rightly feels that he has nothing to do with the administration of justice in Kentucky, and it is his opinion that very soon Indiana must get rid of this disgrace by surrendering Taylor to Kentucky. Governor Durbin now feels that if there was ever an obstacle in the way of Taylor getting a fair trial in Kentucky it has long since passed away, and with it the reason for his detention in Indiana has disappeared. So there is still hope that the good name of Indiana will be vindicated before Governor Durbin retires from office."

The Henderson General, discussing Attorney General Hays' remarkable opinion about life insurance, says: "Two men have $1,000 each: one buys land and the other invests in a life policy. Why should the land pay taxes and the life go free. There is no sense or honesty in such a proposition. Let all be taxed alike." As we understand it, the opinion does not apply to the premium paid, but to the policy itself. For instance at $33 a thousand $1,000 would carry a $30,000 policy, and the Attorney General would tax the holder not on the premium, but the policy at its cash surrender value.

Salvatore Carasco, 22 years of age, a sergeant in the Filipino Constabulary at the World's Fair, killed himself for love of an American girl.

Carasco was a Bataanano Filipino, as the people from the Province of Bataan are called, and had a wife in the Philippines. He left a letter to the woman for love of whom he killed himself. Maj. Haskell, who took possession of it, refuses to make it public.

Kentucky thoroughbreds won sweeping victories at the World's Fair Horse Show last week. Her saddle horses won five out of six first prizes, but trotters two out of three and her Morgan horses captured five ties. Great dissatisfaction is expressed at the award for saddle stallion four-year-old and over, in which the famous Glenbrook was beaten by Kentucky Peak.

Jeffries Knocked Munroe Out at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Aug. 26.—Like the veriest amateur in the ring, Jack Munroe, of Butte, Mont., went down and out before Champion James Jeffries tonight in the second round. The man from the mining district made such an extremely sorry showing that the great throng in Mechanics' Pavilion roundly booed him as he protested to Referee Grady against the decision that he had been given in favor of Jeffries.

For the State Guard Encampment at World's Fair.

Company D. Will Leave Here Thursday Night, September 1.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 29.—Practically everything is in readiness for the coming of the Kentucky State Guard to the Exposition next month. Harry G. Tandy, Quartermaster General and Acting Commissary General, was here today to arrange for rations for all the troops. The contracts he is making call for accommodations for 570 men for nine days each, three times during the month of September, a total of 1,610 men. Mr. Tandy is well pleased with the site selected for the Kentucky soldier boys. He says he will bring over a detail of men next Friday for the purpose of getting the site in readiness to pitch tents, etc.

This will be the first time the Kentucky militia have been paid for attending a camp of instruction. All are to have expenses paid and receive a daily salary amounting to $1.50 for privates, $1.75 for non-commissioned officers and so on up to about $9. Col. Mott Ayres, Paymaster General, will pay off.

The Government has appropriated $27,000, and the State is to supplement this with $14,000. Mr. Tandy is expecting some trouble in finding suitable horses for the officers. The sixteen head needed may be brought from Kentucky.

AT THE FIRST SIGN
Of Disfiguring Humors
Use CUTICURA

Every child born into the world with an inherited tendency to torturing, disfiguring humors of the Skin and Scalp, becomes an object of the most tender solicitude, not only because of its suffering, but because of the dreadful fear that the disfigurement is to be lifelong and mar its future happiness and prosperity. To the Public.

About two years ago a new grocery store opened up in the Odd Fellows' building, under the name of M. E. Edmundson, with the choicest groceries, fruits and vegetables. We have been able, by liberal patronage of appreciative customers to make both ends meet. To them we return our sincere thanks and promise to do our very best in the future to retain their confidence.

The permanent success of any business depends upon the confidence and good opinion of the public. No business can succeed that makes dissatisfied customers. We work and plan to have all goods that we sell give absolute satisfaction in quality and price.

Now, just a word to those who voluntarily promised us at least a share of their patronage. While we have been somewhat disappointed in not having the pleasure of adding your names to our list of customers, we are still anxious to secure your grocery patronage. This true our stock is small, but it is always good and is kept clean and up-to-date, because we order fresh groceries every week to replace reduced stock. Come in and inspect our goods and our mode of doing business, and if you are satisfied we will certainly appreciate your patronage.

We also extend a cordial invitation to our country friends, many of whom perhaps will learn for the first time, on seeing this advertisement, that we are in the grocery business. Give us a trial order and we will guarantee to please you. Fair prices, pure groceries, courteous treatment, straight-forward dealing and prompt delivery is the plan we have adopted for this store. 'Phone us—either 'phone us—and we will gladly supply your wants.

Respectfully,
M. E. EDMUNDSON.

E. B. ROSS

Discusses The Tobacco Situation and Gives Counsel to Growers.

To The Kentuckian.

I want to say that I am heartily in sympathy with "Cactus" in his effort to help tobacco growers. Though I cannot exactly agree with his view that warehouses are the only means by which competition and better prices may be secured for the growers.

Warehouses certainly are one of the important and powerful means by which growers may secure better prices, but not the only, or even the best means to secure fair and reasonable prices for their tobacco.

The best help and relief for the growers lies in themselves. The growers can really control prices of our great staple. The warehouses are and always have been their great friends, and should be helped and encouraged in every way that is fair and legitimate, but farmers themselves can actually control prices.

For each year "the great staple" is actually in the possession of growers, they can, if they only will, claim and demand remunerative prices for the results of their labor. Some may say "But how?"

My answer is "Exactly the same way that other workers claim and get fair prices for their labor." The anthracite coal strikers of Pennsylvania claimed and got their reasonable demands. They simply "stood together as one man" and refused the wages offered them by the operators, and would not work for them until they got their demands.

They got the government of the United States and then J. P. Morgan, and finally the operators themselves, to agree to their terms. Then the battle was won. I do not propose for us farmers to adopt all the methods of the strikers but we certainly can learn from them that it is essential for us to "stand together as one man."

I do not propose to go into the history of the great strike, but will simply state the fact that they stood together and finally obtained their just demands. It cost great suffering and denial but I think it was worth all this cost.

If tobacco growers will they can do likewise, but it is sure to cost them something. For us farmers simply to get together and "resolve and resolve" and then go home and "fall over one another" to get and take the first offer that the gentle buyer will give them will not do it. They must have some of the grit of the strikers, who are generally poor men—poorer than farmers. The farmers must ask a fair price for their products, and hold firm until they get it.

If they cannot get a fair price, they had better "prize" and hold until they get it. Growers should help the warehouses and the warehouses should help the growers. If tobacco growers will just stand together like some other working people do, they can win "with heads down" but just to get into some court house and "resolve and resolve" and then go home and sell out for the first offer, without regard to the interest of any one but themselves—they will not win.

Let us learn from other working people who contend for fair returns for the results of their labor.

There is a great fight being made now by the meat packers from which we might learn something. So far as I am able to learn, the employers of the meat packers of Chicago and

Omaha purpose to reduce the wages of their 50,000 employees from 18½ cents per hour to 17½ cents per hour, or about 8 cents per day; at the same time these same firms have forced down the price of cattle in the hands of farmers, and put up the price of meat to consumers.

This is a fair sample of what the trusts are doing, and of what tobacco growers may expect. The trust has forced down the price of tobacco nearly one half from what it used to be, and put up the price of manufactured tobacco.

The trust put up the price of beef to the consumers; they put down the price of cattle; and they propose to put down the wages of their employees. This great machine cuts three ways. It cuts the farmer, it cuts the employee, and it cuts the poor consumer.

It is a "meanly shame," as the song says. And if it is not stopped the men who are running this government at Washington will be hurled from power.

We tobacco growers may expect to get the same treatment; in fact, we are getting some of it now, and we will get more of it if we do not make a fight and "stand together" as other workers are doing.

This great tobacco trust, I see, is capitalized at $570,000,000. Think of that! That is enough to buy Congress and have laws made to suit themselves.

Let us do all we can to help Messrs. Ewing, Gaines and the warehouses make this fight. We can win if we are true to ourselves and to them. I will suggest that we have some means of deciding what is a fair price and then let him be "Anathema Maranatha" who sells for less.

It looks like each civil district could have a hard-headed, shrewd farmer who would examine each crop and decide what is a fair and reasonable price for it and then prize and send to the warehouses, unless they get a reasonable price. I believe this would help to cure the present evil, and be a beginning that would do a great good in the future.

Why cannot growers stand together as other workers do? One of those meat packers would not dare to take less than a reasonable price for his labor—neither should any farmer.

I applied to several insurance companies in Clarksville for insurance to cover tobacco which I intended to ship abroad. I was refused by all the agents, some of them stating "that they had strict instructions not to insure any tobacco in the country for any parties except the Regies."

I cannot give the names of these agents but I can testify to the facts. The fact that I could not get insurance on tobacco at my place of business prevented me from buying, and thereby prevented competition. I will state that after this agitation in the press and among planters and a fuss was made about this discrimination, I was offered insurance on my tobacco, but it was too late to accomplish anything for this year's business.

Very respectfully,

At Times Display Much Bravery, But Are Not Keen of Comprehension.

That the Cossacks are formidable antagonists cannot be denied. There is, in fact, but one thing that can be said against them, says the Review of Reviews. They are ignorant, 90 per cent. being unable to read or write. The Cossack has but two ideas—that of the force and power of his horse and arms, and that of blind, implicit subordination. He does not think. He has no initiative. He is not resourceful. His scouting is merely a matter of blundering along. In sufficiently large numbers to stumble on what he is seeking. A dozen intelligent scouts could cover as much ground as a regiment of Cossacks. But he can fight. It was the Cossack who led the brilliant career of Charles XII, of Sweden. It was the Cossack, as much as the troops who won the battle of Poltava in 1709. It was the Cossack who retrieved the honors of the Russian arms in the Turkish war of 1877. The Cossack of the military profession returned to Manchuria, where he is now to be pitted against the soldier of Japan, the paragon among soldiers. The latter is a different kind of cavalry, but a light infantry admirably organized, capable of marches of a most incredible length and swiftness, intelligent, crafty and animated by a patriotism that is almost a religion.

WERE GETTING THE ACCENT

Americans Took This Englishman Around to Get Onto His Style of Speech.

"You know you Americans are a strange people," said the Englishman, said the Englishman. The American clubman demurred, says the New York Times. "You ought to back up such a statement as that," he said. "What peculiar experience have you had to cause you to think we're strange people?"

"Well, aw, you know, it's this way," said the Englishman. "I've only been in this country a month, and during that time I've been wine and dined in the most generous way imaginable. Why, I've been taken to all the best clubs here in New York, I've been taken to the theater, I've gone driving and all that sort of thing, and I never could pay for anything. Sometimes the men who took me around were mere acquaintances. I thought it was the good fellow ship that I used to hear about as so in evidence in America. But, you know, last night at the theater I asked the men with me if there wasn't some string to all this generosity, what it was all about anyway? And what do you suppose their bloomin' answer was?"

"He said they were taking me around so as to get on to my way of talking. Now if that isn't bloomin' silly and strange!"
